

May Abundance Flow Through Your Life This Holiday Season

By Michelle Hess

Although feng shui addresses a variety of life concerns, the most popular area of interest is wealth. From fixing leaks in our finances to wanting a greater flow of money in our lives, financial abundance is important to everyone. Our relationship with money is very personal and can be reflected in many ways in the energy, structure and décor of our living spaces. Here are some basic ways for us to enhance the energy in our living spaces and encourage a healthier flow of abundance in our lives:

- Flowing water symbolizes wealth. Fountains, aquariums, pictures of waterfalls, etc. can be used to attract wealth energy, especially if used in the far left hand corner of a room or building (Wealth sector).
- Draining water can deplete wealth, so fix leaky pipes and faucets, running toilets, etc. (again, especially in the Wealth sector).
- Healthy, upward growing plants symbolize growth and prosperity. The jade plant is known as the “money tree” in feng shui.
- Clutter clogs the flow of energy and prevents financial opportunities from reaching us. Pay special attention to reducing clutter in the Wealth sector and the front door area.
- Surround yourself with pictures, objects, colors, textures, etc. that represent abundance to you.

In feng shui, the partner to Wealth is Helpful People. The helpful people in our lives – employers, customers, family and others – may assist us financially with money, support, ideas, referrals and so on. Just as important as cultivating helpful people in our lives is being a helpful person ourselves by sharing, donating, volunteering, and benefiting others. As we give and receive during this Holiday season we can experience for ourselves how wealth flows in a circle, bringing abundance to all.
